

SALT LAKE CITY – “WE LOVE YOU, SALLY CARMICHAEL!,” the feature film directorial debut of actor/director Christopher Gorham, has secured a limited theatrical release for August 4th, 2017.

Produced by Adam Abel through his production company Go Films and executive produced by Daryn Tufts and David Nibley of Flinch Films, “WE LOVE YOU, SALLY CARMICHAEL!” was acquired by Purdie Distribution for North American theatrical distribution after the movie exceeded expectations at the 2017 Cannes Film Market.

Along with directing the film, Gorham plays Simon Hayes, an author who is ashamed to have secretly written “Siren,” an incredibly popular series of young adult romance novels that chronicle the epic love story between a human girl and a merman... all under the pen name, Sally Carmichael.

The film’s cast also includes Elizabeth Tulloch, most recognizable to audiences as Juliette Silverton from NBC’s long-running series “Grimm,” Sebastian Roché, who is currently recurring on “The Man in The High Castle” and HBO’s “The Young Pope,” three time Emmy nominee Jack McBrayer, best known as the lovable Kenneth on “30 Rock”, and Paula Marshall, who starred opposite Jay Mohr in the popular CBS series “Gary Unmarried.”

“I’m very proud of how our little movie has come together and thrilled by the news of its theatrical release,” said Gorham.

The movie’s first trailer can be seen here.

Upon premiering in Hollywood on July 26, 2017, “WE LOVE YOU, SALLY CARMICHAEL!” will launch on approximately 10 screens on August 4th before expanding to additional theaters and formats worldwide.

Purdie Distribution, a company that is “focused on films that elevate the human experience,” headed the recently successful theatrical releases of “Saints and Soldiers: Airborne Creed,” “The Saratov Approach,” and “Once I Was a Beehive.”

Christopher Gorham is perhaps most recognizable as the blind CIA officer, Auggie Anderson, in USA Network’s Covert Affairs, where he also directed three episodes. Gorham recently completed recurring arcs on “2 Broke Girls” for CBS and “The Magicians” for SYFY.

For press inquiries, please contact:

Aaron Evans
801.243.9599
aevans@lovecomm.net